

2 New Lenox Men Casualties

Draft Board Refuses To Defer Needed Hired Man

Last year the 200 acre farm of Wm. E. Andres, 50, at 183rd St. and Oak Park Ave., Tinley Park, produced 73 acres of corn, 58 acres of oats, 25 acres of soybeans, and 28 acres of alfalfa. It also yielded for market the milk of 18 purebred Holstein cows and the eggs and meat supplied by a flock of 500 chickens.

This year, because of the draft it will produce a mere fraction of its potential yield.

Tuesday the herd of cows and their 11 calves, a herd that had taken Andres 18 years to build, was sold at auction.

For the last two years Andres had been able to keep the farm's productivity at its normal level with the help of his hired man, Emil Juergens 21, but Juergens was inducted for the Navy March 3 by Flossmoor draft board 13. Andres had made three futile appeals to the draft board for Juergens deferment.

MARLEY FARM LIFE PROGRAM CLOSED WITH BANQUET

The Marley Community Farm Life Program closed its doors for the season last Wednesday with a banquet. Dinner was served to about ninety people. The program included short talks by the teachers of the various classes and an address by Mr. Earl C. Douglas of Joliet. Sponsored by The Marley Community Church, and under an arrangement with the department of Vocational Agriculture of the Joliet Township high school, the Farm Life Program brought together talents of the church, the farmer teachers and the American Red Cross to present a series of courses which were of vital interest to the community.

Starting on December 13, classes were held each Wednesday night until the closing, banquet night. In addition to the classes, FunNites were held at which members relaxed and enjoyed themselves with games and conversation. An important part of the program were the Forum meetings, held each month, which brought information and discussion on important topics. Mr. Harold Shelly of Chicago presented the first Forum on the subject, Do You Believe Everything You Read? The following month, the Rev. Paul T. Sanders, of the Community Center Foundation of Palos Park, presented a discussion on the vital and timely subject Civilian Attitudes Toward Returning Servicemen. Mr. Donald Sharpe, Assistant Superintendent of the Joliet Township high school, spoke to a capacity audience on Streamlined Democracy. His presentation was excellent, which was attested to by the lively discussions followed over the coffee and donuts which followed. The last Forum was given by Mr. Elmer Rowley, who presented a program of sound pictures, and discussion on "The American Farmer Looks Ahead", in which he reviewed the recent recommendations on agricultural policy of the Association of Land Grant Colleges and Universities.

A class in Electric Wiring taught by Mr. Glenn Peterson, received practical experience in home and farm wiring under prevailing code requirements. Materials for the demonstrations were supplied by a loan from the Univ. of Illinois. Home Canning was the first of two courses presented for the women. Mrs. Chas. Rose of Mokena, taught the course and created so much interest that plans for a summer canning center are being considered. The second course presented for the women was one in Home Nursing, taught by Mrs. Mary Mahoney of The American Red Cross Joliet chapter. The Bible in Modern Living, a course in the relation of the Bible to everyday life, was taught by Mr. Saunders. The course which provoked the most lively discussion in its class hours was taught by Mr. Owen Maue, in Conservation and Production of Feed for Livestock.

The Council directing the activities of the Program was composed of Mr. Julian Gorham, chairman, Mrs. Virginia Sass, secretary and treasurer; Mrs. Sarah Gorham, Walter Haas, Owen Maue, Glenn Peterson, Homer Sabin; Daniel Sass, Mrs. Helen Saunders, Harry Sprout, Miss Caroline Tilsy. Mr. James Bell was the Fire chief.

The Council which will hold over until next year, plans other summer activities besides the proposed Canning Center and hopes to have a bigger and better Farm Life Program to present next winter.

Easter And Mankind

Have you ever stopped to consider that the church is one institution of mankind that has continued to exist down thru the ages? Dynasties have come and gone. Despots have done their evil best to put it out of existence, but the church moves on!

'Tis said that "this is the age of power", but it seems in this war-torn world power is used to destroy! On the other hand the church builds up and uses its mighty influence for good.

Will mankind some day awake to the stupidity of war and refuse to fight for any ruler, but instead yield to the spiritual values sponsored by the church and in its dealings with individuals and nations be guided by that spiritual power?

Let us ponder upon these facts this Easter Season and realize the important part the church plays in the everyday life of our community and nation.

Stanger Brothers Begin Jail Sentence

Louis Stanger of Mokena and his brother William of Chicago who have been in the public eye since their arrest last June in connection with the fatal beating of Luther Scott, 52, also of Mokena and who earlier this year pleaded guilty to a manslaughter count of an indictment returned against them by the September Will County grand jury, entered the Will County jail Monday night to begin serving a three and one-half months sentence.

A six months jail sentence was imposed on the Stanger brothers as a condition of their probation. However, the 72 days which they served in the county jail prior to being admitted to bail in July, was allowed to be deducted from the sentence, the court agreed. With the expiration of their jail sentence, the two brothers are to report to the probation officer of Will County at regular intervals and are to be placed under $500 bond each. Their case is to be continued for two years.

According to the office of the State's Attorney also as a condition of probation, is the agreement of both Louis and William Stanger that they themselves will leave Mokena and Will County.

The Stangers were indicted in the death of Luther Scott of Mokena, father-in-law of their sister Elaine. They were charged with fatally beating Scott in a fight during a family quarrel on June 16th of last year and as a result of which Scott died in Silver Cross hospital in Joliet a week later.

"I, George Lehmann, of American nationality born at Mokena, Illinois, U. S. A., and resident thirty years in Australia now residing at Merrlands Reservoir, intend to apply for naturalization under the Nationality Act of 1920-1936."

STATE RECREATION CHAIRMAN ADDRESSES MOKENA PTA

Mrs. Chas. Balch, State Recreation chairman ICPT was the speaker Tuesday evening at the Mokena PTA meeting.

Her talk was most interesting and one that every parent should have heard. She dealt with the youth problem of today, explaining why the average youth of today is just a little wiser than the average parent but at the same time explained how parents could regain the coveted respect and comradeship of their children. This is attained by having at least one hour a day and one evening a week devoted entirely to the children. Mrs. Balch not only gave facts to bear out her statements but also added plenty of humor and beautiful poems.

The annual election of officers was held resulting with the present officers being re-elected. They are: President, Mrs. Berle Needham, 1st vice president, John Scarth; 2nd vice president, Mrs. Albert Cappel, Sec. Donald Ambuehl and treasurer Mrs. Peter Homerding.

Removal of Tree From Highway Causes Hot Argument

Now that spring is here or at least in the offing, many people feel a quite natural urge to plant a tree, or perhaps a bush or two along the back yard fence line. The question comes to mind, where can we find a nice easy-to-move planting?

Some folks drive along a country roadside and behold the very thing for which they are looking in dogwood, or maybe its a wa-hoo, we are not sure. Out of the baggage compartment comes the old spade. Just as the would be planters have a bush loosened up maybe a rude person pulls along side and politely says, "naughty naughty".

The state law prohibits what you are doing. This law says: "Whoever willfully drives, upon, picks, removes, destroys, cuts down, or in any way injures a tree, shrub, plant or flower planted or growing in or upon the right of way of any highway in the state is guilty of misdemeanor and upon conviction shall be fined not less than $1 nor more than $100".

Unfortunately the law above quoted exempts to some extent such vandalism by highway officials.

One evening this week some people from over Frankfort way were interrupted while digging up an elm tree across the road from the Sandy Williams property south of Mokena. When asked who gave them permission to dig up these trees they were reported as stating that they were buying them from the Township through Henry Yunker Frankfort Commissioner of Highways.

When Mr. Williams called Commissioner Yunker on the telephone and protested against the removal of trees and shrubs along the road side Mr. Williams claims Commissioner Yunker became very angry and declared that he would proceed at once to yank out by the roots every tree and shrub found growing upon the borders of the short section of a part of the country lane what was once a part of Wolf Road and which at the present time is not used for general traffic.

This short detour known in pre-war days as "lovers lane" is now known by nature lovers as one of the few strips of highway in Frankfort Township which has not been ruined by acts of vandalism. Its borders are lined with sumac, dogwood, oaks, elms and many other native shrubs and trees. About the time when Mr. Williams observed the Frankfort party digging up trees Mr. Cleveland came along and pointed out what the law says and the Frankfort man agreed not to dig up any more trees or shrubs.

The consensus of opinion among people who occasionally drive along this beautiful side road, is: "please don't cut off the road side growth."

Mr. Williams, a resident on the former Duncan property, stated he located there chiefly on account of the beauty spot and says that if this country lane is denuded of all trees and shrubs it will ruin the beauty of that part of the countryside.

REORGANIZE FOR FARM FIRE PROTECTION

On last Tuesday evening at a meeting of farmer pledge holders and Frankfort village officials of the Fire Department held at the Frankfort hall, it was voted to reorganize the membership, secure new pledges and eliminate dead timber.

Many former pledge holders have sold their farms, while others have disposed of or lost their pledge cards.

It was also voted to ask all pledge holders for a contribution of three dollars each to aid in paying for new fire equipment recently acquired for the specific benefit of farmer members.

Committees were appointed to plan and complete some equitable form of reorganization.

PLOT ON HITLER

Those whose business it is to study the intricate problem of German politics have now come to the conclusion that if it hadn't been for the July 20 putsch against Hitler, we might have been saved six months or so of fighting.

The attempt on Hitler's life gave him the excuse to clean out every military man not in sympathy with the war, and his military leaders since then have lacked the courage to suggest an armistice—even though they knew the war was hopeless.

Here is the inside story of what happened.

The Hitler plot had been cleverly arranged by the British. They had been working for months with a small secret segment of anti-Hitler officers inside the German army. Actually, their pipelines into Germany had been laid even before the war started. Weeks and weeks of the most minute planning had gone into the plot.

However, as in anything as dangerous as an attempt to assassinate the world's chief madman, something went wrong at the last minute. A high-up German officer on the general staff had agreed to place a briefcase containing a time-bomb alongside Hitler's chair during a meeting of the general staff.

He did so. But either Hitler moved away or else did not sit where expected. At any rate when the bomb went off, it killed several officers, but Hitler was only wounded in the hand by a bomb fragment.

That incident, however, touched off the bloodiest blood purge in history. Neutral sources estimate that 100,000 German officers and other high-up officials suspected of anti-Hitler bias were killed. Any German leader who had grown cool regarding the war or was slightly critical of Hitler was included.

In the last war, it was the German general staff who demanded of the Kaiser that he sue for peace as early as September 29, 1918. The German civilian government resisted. In this war it was expected that the professional military caste would see the futility of further fighting and also sue for peace after the Normandy invasion last June.

But as a result of the July purge the military leaders who survived dared not brave Hitler's wrath.

POSTWAR CONSCRIPTION

Although no final decision has been made by FDR personally, Undersecretary of War Bob Patterson and several other White House advisers are urging him to press for immediate congressional action on a postwar compulsory military training law covering all men 18 to 26.

Patterson and some of the army brass hats want Roosevelt to jam the conscription bill through congress before the war is over. They are using the line with FDR that passage of a peacetime conscription bill by congress now will be further evidence to the United Nations that this country will maintain a sizable military force to help keep the peace.

Congressional leaders so far are against immediate consideration, feel they'll have their hands full in the next few months getting more urgent postwar measures through capitol hill, such as jobs, without starting up a terrific controversy over conscription.

Note: The White House is being deluged with mail against postwar conscription. Most of the public seems to be against it.

Military police are shown using an army mine detector, whose duties are usually confined to the battlefield, in the search for a gun believed to have been used in a murder. A gun was found but it was not the one sought. This is believed to be the first time the military mine detector has been used in crime detection. The mine detector indicates the presence of metal. This improved mine detector, developed during the present war, offers many postwar possibilities in addition to that of crime detector. Already plans are being formulated to utilize a modified form in a group to be organized for treasure hunting.

THE AUTHOR AND PERFECTER OF OUR FAITH

LESSON TEXT—Matthew 27:62-68.

GOLDEN TEXT—Let us run with patience the race that is set before us, looking unto Jesus the author and perfecter of our faith.—Hebrews 12:1, 2.

Christianity is a resurrection faith! How good it is to recall that, in this troubled year of 1945, even as we share once more the spiritual inspiration of Easter Sunday.

Today we recall that the loving hands of His friends and followers had given themselves in what they thought was to be their final act of devotion to their Lord. His body had been tenderly laid in Joseph's tomb and the great stone rolled in place at its door.

But even as some were kind and loving, there were others who were so relentless in their hatred that they pursued Christ even beyond the grave.

I. The Hatred of Christ's Enemies (27:62-66).

We sometimes wonder at the bitterness of the enemies of Christianity in our day. Had we given more earnest heed to the Bible story we should have known that it was so from the very beginning.

The wicked men who brought about the crucifixion of Jesus were not content to let Him rest in His grave. They had lusted after His life and they had taken that, but even as He lay silent in the tomb, the priests and the Pharisees came to Pilate and called Him "that deceiver" (v. 63) and demanded a special guard.

They feared that His disciples would perpetrate a fraud, and after stealing the body declare that He was risen. Wicked and deceitful hearts can imagine all sorts of treachery on the part of others.

The hatred of unbelievers toward Christ and toward His followers knows no stopping place. In civilized lands and among cultured people it operates under a cloak of respectability, but it is nonetheless bitter and relentless in its pursuit of Him and of His church.

II. The Victory of Christ (28:1-6).

Victory and praise should be the keynote of Christianity. Why should we be doleful and sad? Our Lord has come back victorious from the grave! We may be glad and sing even in the midst of earth's sorrows and distresses. Let praise be the employ of our lips constantly as we worship Him and work for Him.

The picture that greeted the surprised eyes of the two women as they came to the grave, as it began to dawn on the first day of the week, was one resplendent with the glory and majesty of God. The earth quaked as the lightning flashed. The angel of the Lord broke through the supposedly unbreakable seal of Rome and rolled back the stone which was to have permanently closed the door to the tomb.

This was done, not to release Christ—for He had already gone, no grave could hold Him—but that men might see the empty grave and know that He was risen. Other religions keep the graves of their founders. Christianity points to an empty tomb.

To the foes of Christ represented by the keepers, the coming of the angel and the revelation of the power of God brought absolute discomfiture. That is still true. Men will argue with theology, church methods, even Christian profession, but when they see the power of God revealed, they can only be "as dead men."

To the friends of Christ, the angel brought comfort and assurance. Their fears were assuaged by his word of comfort, and then their faith was revived by the assurance that Christ was risen. The resurrection declares that He is the Son of God with power, the Saviour of the world.

III. The Joy of Christ's Disciples (28:7-9).

The followers of Christ had their share of fear and unbelief, but it was quickly overcome by joy and assurance as they knew that their Lord was risen.

The note of great joy is highly appropriate on Easter Sunday, but just as proper on every Sunday—yes, every day of the Christian's life. He is risen from the dead! That settles all questions about His deity, His power, His salvation. It meets the problems of our lives with an unfailing word of confidence and joy.

Be sure to note that such good news must not be kept to ourselves. We should emulate the zeal of the disciples, who "departed quickly" to make it known to their families and friends. The story of the victorious Saviour is still unknown to many thousands—possibly we should say millions. Let someone depart quickly to tell them of Jesus. And don't forget to ask yourself, "Should that someone be me?"

Jesus met them on the way with a greeting of peace. He loves to fellowship with His people as they go on His errands. You will find Him there awaiting your coming.

Country Cured

HOMER
by CROY

© W.N.U. SERVICE

THE STORY THUS FAR: Amos Croy and his wife settled on a farm in Missouri where Homer was born. Homer was the first Croy to go to high school and college. In New York he worked on a woman's magazine, wrote a novel, and a play. His father and mother both died and Homer mortgaged the farm to help out a relative who was in serious trouble. He then wrote a dealer training film which brought in enough to pay off the mortgages. Homer published and sold for a profit a magazine for authors, he served with the Y.M.C.A. in World War I, wrote radio version of "Show Boat" and worked with Chic Sale and was secretary of Authors League. He continued with his novel writing.

CHAPTER XXIV

Men were posted in the wagons to drive for the women, a starting gun was fired, and slowly—interminably it seemed to me—the wagons inched across the field. Those women knew how to strip ribbons, pick up down-corn, and keep on the throwboard. They were the farm women I had known all my life—tanned, shapeless, amazingly capable, equal to any emergency, overworked and underpaid. At first glance, however, they didn't look like women, for most were in overalls, with men's hats pulled down over their hair. They were there to work and that was exactly what they were doing; regularly, in a sort of rhythm, the ears of corn beat on the throwboards. But the women were feminine after all, no matter what their cover-alls said. For a quarter of them were wearing high-heeled shoes. If my mother had come out to the field in a pair of high-heeled shoes, I'm sure Pa'd've sent her back to the house. Times change and conditions change. But people don't; for these women were as my mother was—except for the item of the shoes. Sometimes it seems to me, people are the one constant factor in the whole scheme of things.

When the gun went off the second time, the women climbed into the wagons and the wagons started for the scales where the corn would have to be weighed; and the gleanings, too, and the overlooked corn. One woman, before she would allow herself to be driven through the cheering lines, brought out her lipstick. I am glad Pa never saw a Women's National Corn Husking Contest. He had stood up under many things, but a lipstick in a cornfield might have proved too much.

I asked one of the winners what she was going to do with the money. It was going into a college fund, she said. Then glanced proudly at her son she had by the hand.

The contest was held near a farm owned by former President Herbert C. Hoover. I had never been on his farm, so now we drove to it and I walked across it, thrilled to have such a distinguished fellow farmer. When I saw the condition the farm was in, I knew it was just as well he had stuck to politics.

Once, at the behest of his political guides, he had come back to make a speech, just as Farmer Willie had gone to Elwood, Indiana, to show what a callus-handed son of the soil he was.

Mr. Hoover's fellow farmers came to see one of their kind. The crowd became so great that Mr. Hoover adjourned to his front porch and started to talk to his friends. His friends were more friendly than he knew, and crowded on the porch. Suddenly there was a noise, and a shock, too, and Hoover and his friends and the porch went down. There was a scramble but, after a few moments, Mr. Hoover was able to right himself and went on with the alarming condition of the country.

The porch is still there, in about the fix the speech left it in.

When I got back to New York, I went to the Dutch Treat Club, and there was my neighbor. I went to him, after he had finished lunch but was still sitting at the table, and said:

"Mr. Hoover, I'm going to say something to you that no one else in this club has ever said."

He glanced at me, evidently wondering what to make of this approach.

I said, "I walked across your farm in Missouri a few days ago."

Now he did look with interest. "Well, how is it?"

I told him just what I had seen. That it was in poor condition; the outbuildings were falling to pieces, the house needed painting, the fences were down, the gullies were washing and the soil itself was over-corned. Even, I said, one side of his cave had fallen in.

He asked questions and I told him just how the farm impressed me. Then he wanted to know if I would be interested in buying it. I told him that I did not think I would.

After I left, he went on smoking; but more thoughtfully, it seemed to me. Maybe it had dawned on him that he hadn't been cut out to be a farmer.

All visits are not so glamorous; there are plenty of hard, practical problems to solve. And so Spide and I and Lloyd stand on the south side of the barn and try to work them out. How much land should go in wheat? How much in corn? How much in rye? This is complicated by the fact that the government must always be reckoned with. We will be paid so much for raising this; and so much for not raising that. It takes a bit of figuring.

As we walk across the farm, I see a cornpicker at work. It is not on our land, but in a few days one will be snatching off the ears on our land. I think back to the days when my father shucked corn and my mother came out and helped him, and that night poured tallow in the cracks in his hands. And I think back to the days when I husked, too—surely the hardest work in the world. The land doesn't yield as it did then. Fertilizer is going on it—something my father never dreamed of. And there are a million bugs and insects busy at the corn and at the land, pests he never heard of. The vast fertility of the prairie soil has been depleted. But it's still black loam, still the finest cornland in the world.

We have dinner. Nellie sits in the chair nearest the kitchen, where my mother used to hop up. Spide only bows his head, for the Logans are Catholics. I think of my father sitting in Spide's chair, and a choky feeling pushes into my collar. A little disappointment about dinner, for the cooking isn't as good, and the food isn't as good, as I remember it. After all, there's nothing to season food like a couple of plow hands.

After dinner, house problems. Every room must be inspected. A new ceiling will have to go into this one. But Nellie's son-in-law, who lives in Omaha, is a plasterer. "When his vacation comes we'll invite him to see us," says Nellie. So that's taken care of.

Why! this is the very room where my father used to fall asleep over his livestock paper. The very one where I used to read the farm papers. What does the farm boy of today read? Well, he reads the farm weeklies and semimonthlies (Wallaces' Farmer is still going strong) and he listens to the National Radio Hour and to the market prices as they come in over the Midwest stations. The mail-order monthlies are all gone; but there has come to take their place a plague of cheap movie magazines and radio guides and comic supplement magazines detailing the adventures of Superman and his kind. And the hired man, today, instead of having pictures of race horses pinned on his wall, has Poses of Beautiful Art Models. Sometimes I wish the mail-order magazines hadn't gone their way.

We look at the bathroom. The nondecaying wallpaper has about decayed. So that goes down on the list. It is a single duty bathroom; merely a bathroom and nothing else. I am asked by my curious city friends what a woman on a farm does when she wants to be alone. The answer is simple. She does as the women have done for three-quarters of a century. Goes to an arrangement in the back yard, or in the edge of the orchard, designed for that very purpose. Naturally in winter time there are certain problems to solve. But she solves them and never once thinks of herself as underprivileged.

That Croy bathroom means something to me, for it was the first in all the neighborhood. People came as if to a shrine. I turn to Nellie and say:

"How many bathrooms are there in this neighborhood?" She and Spide count it up. On the ten farms nearest ours there are two bathrooms. They still go out back. And that's today in the black loam section.

We go upstairs to the northwest bedroom and my heart goes flutter. This is the room where I had my panel of "Six Famous American Authors." There's where the old Barlock used to repose; on the wall was a picture of Victor Hugo and right under it I read "Les Miserables."

"Homer, the roof leaks," says Nellie. This is the room where I packed my telescope with the mousehole. How long ago that was! Yet how recent. I remember my mother said: "Homer, I wish you didn't have to go off to the city with a hole in your telescope."

My mind races away to St. Joseph where I saw my second street-car and I think of something that happened, later, when I came to have as a friend the man who invented the electric streetcar, Frank J. Sprague, and he told me this street-car line was the second in the United States.

We go into "Renzo Davis" room. Two sacks of shelled corn are on the floor. "We don't dare leave our hybrid at the barn," says Spide. "Mice."

"This room should be papered," says Nellie.

From room to room we go, and from place to place, then outside. The kitchen foundation is getting weak in the knees; we'll have to have the cement man out.

We go into the basement under the parlor, and I think of the time my father got the acetylene gas craze and had a machine installed in this cellar room. The machine was supposed to dump pockets of carbide into the water and make gas for our lights. One night the machine didn't work and Pa told me to take the lantern and go down and see what was the matter. I came into this room, opened the machine and peered into its depth, aided by the lantern. Suddenly there was an explosion and I was knocked as flat as a dolly.

In the back yard, behind the "new" house, is the house where I was born. If there are any chickens in it, I'll wring their necks. Thank God! there aren't. In the floor is the augurhole where I used to see the water drain off and wonder where it went; and under the clock shelf is the very nail where our Hostetter's Almanac hung. And a little to the left is the wall where Pa kept the International Harvester calendar, with circles around the dates when the cows would freshen.

Then to the henhouse. The roof leaks. I don't know why it is, but henhouse roofs always leak. Put that down, too.

We have supper and that evening the neighbors come in, the boys and girls I've grown up with; and with them their children. And, here and there, a grandchild. It just doesn't seem possible. But there they are, staring popeyed as if I was Rip Van Winkle. We talk about the weather and crops, just as we used to; and how the schoolteacher is panning out. Then about what the government says we'll have to do next. That's all new. And puzzling. But on the good side. Our farmers like what the government is doing.

They know about the tall buildings, for they've seen them in the movies; but the subway is different. When I tell them that the train I go to Washington Heights on, runs three miles under the ground without stopping, they glance at each other again. Well, let him talk. His father and mother tried hard enough.

After my "lies" are over, the conversation again swings back to neighborhood matters. Mysteriously Nellie and Opal get up and tiptoe out and there is a clinking in the kitchen. Refreshment time; pretty soon we are eating ice cream and homemade cake. Not ice cream made on the back porch, in a salt-water freezer, but fetched out from town. And not as good, either.

The children are getting restless. It's half-past nine. Why, we haven't been up that late since Grandpa died.

After a while they've gone and the house seems lonely and empty—just as it did when I was a boy. A train whistles in the distance and an exquisite agony lays hold of me.

And now, as I lie in my old room, I think: Some day I'll be no more, and when that day comes I'd like to have my ashes sprinkled on the farm.

The next day we go in to trade, but now it takes only a few minutes to clip off the six miles. What wouldn't I have given if old Dave had had six cylinders? It's a farming town, the guidebooks say, then add: "Industry—none." They're a little off, for there's the lightning-rod factory. A dozen people employed there, counting, of course, the office workers. You're nobody if you're not proud of your home town. We have some "names" that we're proud of—men who were born in the county and who have distinguished themselves. There's George Robb Ellison, judge of the Missouri Supreme Court. Remember I mentioned a boy who went to Harvard and came back with a feather-edge haircut? Well, that was George. And there's Merrill E. Otis, Federal Judge, Kansas City. (He's the one who sentenced Pendergast.) Dale Carnegie, the writer and lecturer. Ed H. Moore was born in our county and lived there all his early days; then went to Oklahoma and beat Josh Lee and became United States Senator. (Should never have left Missouri.) Forrest C. Donnell became Governor of Missouri. Yep, one of our boys. Have you heard of Dawson City, British Columbia, near Alaska? Named for one of our boys.

Your 1945 Garden— Essential Food Will Come From Home Gardens

APPROXIMATELY 19 million Victory gardeners throughout the nation are again called upon this year to rally behind the call for more food production as essential to the war effort and total Victory.

With increased drain upon manpower and increased production of war supplies demanded by military leaders, the need for increased supplies of food and fresh vegetables to supplement the nation's food supply is urgent and essential.

War Food Administrator Marvin Jones recognizes this fact, and as spring planting time nears, he issued a statement pointing out the importance of the Victory garden in rounding out the nation's war effort.

"Food is just as necessary as guns, tanks and planes. Home gardeners produced over 40 per cent of the fresh vegetables last year and we are asking them to equal this record in 1945."

This 40 per cent of our vegetable production in 1944 equalled almost 8 million tons of vegetables produced in the 19 million Victory gardens of the nation.

The Victory garden program is not only a call to patriotic effort in war time, but it is part of a long range effort on the part of the department of agriculture and the state agricultural extension service to encourage and advocate more and better farm gardens. Objectives of the program not only include the production of food on the farms and in the small towns where space permits larger gardens, but it reaches into the realm of a deep inner satisfaction, healthful out-door work which relaxes, and more plentiful health-giving, vitamin-filled fresh vegetables. The Victory garden is your insurance of attainment of these objectives.

A Victory garden, small or large in city, town, hamlet or on the farm is one of the finest illustrations of how the American people here at home can back up the boys who are fighting. Particularly in the cities and towns an hour or two each day in the garden at the end of a busy day in office, factory, store or other occupation, has provided a wonderful balance wheel to these millions who have worked day-in and day-out at war jobs with little or no vacation or recreation. Contact with the earth and with growing things is good for every one... relaxing, a release for tension and pent-up emotions brought about by the war in which we are engaged.

Practical Reasons For Home Gardens

Here, however, are some practical reasons why the growing of a Victory garden should be undertaken wherever sufficient space may be obtained:

- 1—It will help win the war.
- 2—You will get more and better vegetables.
- 3—You will save money.
- 4—Despite bottlenecks in transportation and distribution, you will have fresh vegetables when you want them.

The department of agriculture has estimated that even a small garden, if well planned and tended, will yield from $25 to $50 worth of vegetables in a season.

Vegetables right out of the garden have more food value, because for most vegetables there is a rapid loss of certain vitamin elements after vegetables are taken from the soil, and the average American needs about 50 per cent more green and yellow vegetables and about 20 per cent more tomatoes and citrus fruits than were available in 1944, according to nutritionists.

Home grown foods are tastier, for they do have a better flavor when they are really fresh, and then, gardening is fun.

Many of the Victory gardens will be operated on farms. These will save millions of dollars for the farmers of the country. A well-cared-for garden will yield a greater return per acre than any similar area on the farm devoted to regular farm crops.

Certain crops may be grown in southern gardens throughout the year; in fact, there are thousands of southern farm gardens that produce at least one or two fresh vegetables every day in the year. The northern gardening season may be extended greatly by use of hotbeds.

TWO FREIGHT RATE DECISIONS AFFECT FARMERS' INTERESTS

Two recent announcements on freight rates are of particular interest to farmers, according to Guy W. Baxter, director of transportation, for the Illinois Agricultural Association.

First concerns new freight rate on ground rock phosphate from Florida to Chicago which became effective March 20. The new rate is $7.35 per gross ton as compared with the former rate of $9.52.

Second matter of interest to Illinois River grain farmers and elevators is the decision of the Interstate Commerce Com., on proportional rates on grain shipped to Chicago by barge from Illinois River territory and moved east from Chicago by rail.

The Editor had an interesting experience the past week. Last week while in Chicago, he issued a check to a Chicago business man. Monday this man told the Editor to stop payment on the check as he had been pickpocketed on a crowded subway car and a new pocketbook in which the check had been placed had been stolen.

The business man had told a police captain friend of his about the incident. Monday evening the editor was notified to let the check pass as it had been recovered. According to the police, Chicago detectives had seized a group of daps Saturday night and upon searching them they found the check in question on one of the daps. The latter had been foolish enough to forge the signature of the payee on the back of the check. Now he has two charges against him, one for pickpocketing, second for forgery. Much credit is due to the Chicago police force for their quick work in apprehending criminals.

Dear Friends:
Thank you very kindly for the fine Christmas package I have just received. That was the 19th package I have received since the middle of October. The rest of the boys and I certainly do appreciate what you folks back home are doing for us who are in the Service, so keep up the good work folks. We often talk about how glad we will be when we once again will be back with our dear relatives and friends.

Everyone is busy these days, all the roads are leading to Berlin. The end of the war is drawing nearer and nearer and the battles are getting more severe than ever. This I know, for being a combat Eng. we can see the enemy is doing everything in his power to stop the swift and mobile Army of ours by means of various obstacles. I wish I could tell you more about this but I am sorry.

Mr. Semmler has been sending me the Orland Park Herald for the past two years. I appreciate the paper so much. Always glad to know how the folks back home are and what they are doing. We boys over here are just as anxious to read about the home news as you folks are anxious to read about how we are doing.

The Climate conditions are comparably the same as where you are. I have a pair of packs on with felt soles, my feet still get cold at times, outside of this everything is going according to plan. Sorry I can't tell you just exactly where I am but I have been in Strasburg. It is a large city on the River Rhine.

My best regards to you all.

Sincerely yours,
Wm. P. Lauffe

Dear Friends:

I will write you a few lines to let you know I received your lovely Christmas package and sure was glad to get it. As it is the first I have gotten since I came overseas, I was in the hospital when I got the package and it sure came in handy. It wasn't much of a wound and I will be going back to my outfit soon. It sure is good to know the people back home are thinking of the boys. This is a lovely country here but it can't compare to the good old USA, and I sure hope that all of us are back soon. Hoping this finds all my friends and neighbors well and happy.

Dear Friends:

Am in receipt of your letter of Jan. 4 and was very glad to hear from you. I have not received my Christmas package as yet but am thanking you just the same. In fact packages that have been sent as far back as May have not arrived. The last Tinley paper I received was a June issue.

We had it pretty rough during Thanksgiving but things got quieter during Christmas and New Years. Now we have a nice area on the Leyte gulf with movies 3 times a week, our Radio programs are very limited. I believe the fighting on the Philippine front will be over and with things going alright in Europe, lets hope its all over soon. Thanking all of you again and hoping to hear from you again soon. I remain,

Yours truly,

Jan. 24, 1945

Dear Friends:

Just a few lines to thank you for your swell Christmas package. It was a little late catching up with me but I was just getting settled here about that time.

Had a pretty nice trip coming over we were fortunate enough to fly our own fortress across so I got to see quite a lot of country much more than I ever expected to. Everything looks about the same from the air so I couldn't tell much about it.

We are living in tents which aren't so bad the mud is the worst but it won't be too long before spring comes along, dress everything up so it won't be too glad. We've got an old Italian kerosene lamp for a light with a coke bottle for a chimney. Anything will do in a pinch and this is one.

I've got two missions so far over Germany and Yugoslavia with thirty three more to sweat out. I'll be glad when they're all in and get back to the States. Well that's just about all for tonight so until later.

Thanking you again for the package.

As ever,

Postwar Radios Will Be Improved

Twin instruments will provide a television receiver (left) and combination radio-phonograph equipped with frequency modulation.

NEW postwar radios which will be available in local radio and electric shops, approximately six months after hostilities cease, will look much like 1941 models, but will provide better reception, according to an article in nationally-circulated Capper's Farmer.

"These new radios will have more powerful tubes and other parts improved through wartime research," says the article in the magazine read by 1,250,000 farm families. "They are expected to cost from a tenth to one-half more than prewar sets. "Battery sets will be more compact. Batteries will be longer lasting and some may be recharged by plugging into electric outlets.

Small radios in plastic cases will fit into bedrooms, kitchens and dining-rooms.

"Television no longer is just around the corner. Nine telecasting stations already are in operation and more applications for additional ones are on file with the Federal Communications Commission. New sets will be on the market six months to a year after the war, but it may be some time before television broadcasts are available in rural areas."

A large percentage of the new sets will receive both the present amplitude modulation and the new FM (frequency modulation) which virtually eliminates hissing, buzzing, station overlapping and other static.

A screen rises from this projection-type television set as the cabinet lid is raised.

SIGN LANGUAGE OF HUNGRY CROPS TELLS PLANT FOOD NEEDS

CHICAGO — The simple formula "ask the plant itself" was recommended to midwest farmers as the best means of discovering the causes of plant food hunger that bring about costly crop failures every year.

"Plants starving for nourishment have a sign language that readily reveals their distress to any farmer who watches the foliage and size of the plants during the growing season and then examines the appearance of the matured crop at harvest time," says a statement made public here by the Middle West Soil Improvement Committee.

"For instance, corn that is famished for plant food tells its hunger story in a variety of ways. When nitrogen is needed, the plant is stunted and undernourished, the leaves are greenish-yellow or orange-yellow and the tips are withered. When sufficient phosphorus is lacking, the leaves have a tendency to become purplish and the young plant is spindly and unthrifty. When potash, the balance wheel of plant foods, is absent from the soil, growth slows down, leaves scorch and the corn is more easily susceptible to diseases and parasites. At harvest, the ears are chaffy and of poor quality.

"Legumes, wheat and other grains, potatoes and other field crops reveal their hunger distress by various signs, all of which tell their need for nitrogen, phosphorus and potash. From experience with their 1944 crops, farmers may determine how the lack of essential fertilizer elements spelled the difference between bumper yields and failure.

"One safe remedy for diet deficiencies of all kinds is to have the soil tested before planting time to determine just which elements are lacking. But the surest preventive is to see that the land is regularly supplied with plenty of mixed fertilizer containing nitrogen, phosphorus and potash."

Crops Tell Their Own Story of Plant Food Hunger.

SNAPPY FACTS ABOUT RUBBER

There are two big "unknowns" in trying to anticipate the eventual "balance of power" between natural and synthetic rubber, in the opinion of John L. Collier, President of The B. F. Goodrich Co. These unknowns are respective production costs and the relative value of these types of rubber in different kinds of products several years hence.

During the manufacture of one variety of synthetic rubber, materials must be kept at a temperature of 100 degrees below zero.

Use of rayon has improved the performance of synthetic truck tires as much as 375 per cent compared with tires made of cotton cord, some industry authorities report.

Help alfalfa, clovers and soybeans make greater profits. Inoculate the seed with NITRAGIN. You give these crops more vigor to grow faster, fight weeds and drought, and make bigger yields of rich feed. You help build soil fertility. Without inoculation, legumes may be soil robbers and their growth stunted.

INOCULATE ALL ALFALFA, CLOVERS, SOYBEANS, LESPEDEZA WITH NITRAGIN. NITRAGIN costs about 10 cents an acre, takes a few minutes to use. It's the oldest inoculant... widely used by farmers for 45 years. Produced by trained scientists in a modern laboratory. Get NITRAGIN, in the yellow can, from your seed dealer.

MANY years ago Ellsworth Vines, the star tennis player, and not a bad golfer, made this remark—

"It's surprising how long it takes a fellow to get into hard competitive condition—and what a short time it takes to get out again." And Vines was a hard trainer.

This happens to be completely true. It is one answer to Gunder Haegg's showing in the recent IC 4A games at Madison Square Garden where he practically collapsed in the mile run. Haegg, the great Swedish flash, outdoors and in shape, has run the mile in 4.02. He was timed around Gunder Haegg 4.31 over an indoor track with no chance to train, soon after he landed.

This means a lost or missing margin close to 29 seconds—or some thing more than 150 yards. In the best mile that Haegg ever ran he would have beaten Rafferty's 4:16.4 mile by over 90 yards. For a 4.16 mile is barely more than a gallop. Looking as far back as Joie Ray, a 4.16 mile would have been a common canter for the old-timer.

Rafferty has always been a fighting miler. Then we had Nurmi's 4:10.4. And Nurmi was one of the great runners of all time. From that mile to 10,000 meters. From that point on down to Arne Andersson's record mile in 4:16 we have seen the records fall—via Glen Cunningham, Lovelock, Haegg and others who hammered the figures down, split second by split second.

But in all this natural ability has needed the hardest sort of work, plus able trainers and able coaches who have yet to receive the credit they deserved.

The Greatest Race

To me the mile has always been the greatest of all races. It combines more in the way of speed and stamina than any other distance. The 100 yards—the 220—even the quarter—are largely speed tests. Although it must be admitted that the 440 yard dash, or the quarter, is also a killing distance, calling for extended speed. But the mile is something in between the sprints and the longer distance races, leading up to the marathon.

The average, normal human being from city and farm, usually talks and thinks in terms of the mile. It is a mile to some place—or 5 miles—or 10 miles. You know just about what that means.

The mile today is the ideal combination of speed and stamina—a race that draws and keeps the crowds interest. The 100 and the 220 are over in too much of a hurry while the 2 and 3 mile races are too long to watch.

In this country most of our best running has been turned in from the 100 yard dash to the mile. We have had few runners with the patience to train for longer distances. We have been better at the shorter distances with Paddock, Wykoff, Tolan, Jesse Owens, and many others. Here it was largely a matter of a flash—or half a stride.

But the main or major goal in track racing has been to reach the mile in four minutes flat. Here is something that demands both speed and stamina to the ultimate limit. The time may come when some one will beat four minutes. But that is the big target now.

Arne Andersson has brought the mile to just a trifle more than a second from the four minute mark. Four minutes will be reached and beaten, but hardly through the war period. For with all the ability one may have, there is still the matter of condition and hard training through a long period.

For example, Gunder Haegg is still the greatest distance runner in the world, over the one, two and three-mile tests. His record is one of the most amazing in all sport. Yet, out of condition, his last showing at the mile and his best showing at the mile, are close to 29 seconds apart. We have always believed there are no supermen in sport. Records are only made to be broken. What they all want is the target. Sooner or later they bowl this target over.

It has been said—"There is no substitute for work." Also—"There is no substitute for experience." Certainly in a mile run there is no substitute for a long, hard training period that brings the legs and the wind working together as a team. And that goes for a Mercury.

Tops in Training

While we're speaking of condition, if anyone cares to know about the all-time top in physical training, it wouldn't be a bad idea to visit the four navy pre-flight schools at North Carolina, Georgia, St. Mary's and Iowa. These four major pre-flight headquarters were first set up by Comdr. Tom Hamilton, carried on by Comdr. Frank Wickhorst and are now under Comdr. "Killer" Kane. In addition to the academic and military side they have done an incredible job of conditioning.

Pasteurization of Eggs Improves Quality

New Method an Aid To Egg Storage

PASTEURIZATION of eggs as developed at the University of Missouri, or the flash heat treatment of Cornell university, promises to prove of considerable value to the poultry and farm industries.

The pasteurizing of shell eggs not only destroys bacteria but causes shell eggs to retain their desirable physical properties much longer than do untreated eggs.

In the Cornell flash heat treatment of eggs, a five-second exposure of fresh eggs to boiling water forms a thin protective film of coagulated albumen, adherent to the shell membrane. This treatment of eggs at temperatures above the coagulation point of albumen proved to be an efficient method for the preservation of table eggs.

The application of the pasteurization process to shell eggs may prove of great value to the poultry industry when applied to eggs as they pass through the regular marketing channels.

The treatment is simple and requires only average kitchen equipment. The eggs are plunged into boiling water for five seconds, cooled and placed in cold storage or a refrigerator, where they will stay fresh for 12 months. Without refrigeration they should remain fresh for about three months.

Barn-Curing Hay Safe And Improves Quality

Making hay while the sun doesn't shine has been simplified for hundreds of farmers who have built electrically operated hay driers, using forced ventilation to cure hay in the mow.

The installation consists of wooden ducts, built on the mow floor, through which air is forced into and upward through the hay by a blower powered with an electric motor, or when electricity is not available by a gasoline motor.

Air Circulation in Mow.

The use of the forced ventilation system enables farmers to move their forage crops into the mow two to four hours after cutting, before the leaves begin to shed.

Farm Windbreaks Pay Dividends Annually

Planting evergreen windbreaks which will pay dividends in the future is a wartime farm improvement that should be undertaken at once.

Not only will the windbreak be a protection for the home, cutting down the cold winter winds, it will save heating costs as a result.

In many localities it is possible to secure planting stock which would have some commercial value—fruit, nuts or for the wood contained.

As materials for many other improvements are not available, now is the time when considerable improvement can be made by planting desirable trees. Not only will the value of the land be improved, but many of the trees could produce an annual pay crop to the farmer.

Little Known Stories About Well-Known People:

His contemporaries thought Teddy Roosevelt was conceited. They told this one on him. That Teddy died and went to heaven where he discovered the famed choir had been disbanded. He told St. Peter it should be reorganized and that he, Teddy, would conduct.

"Very well," said The Old Fellow. "How many tenors should we have?" Teddy suggested ten million tenors, as many baritones, etc.

"How many bass singers?" asked St. Peter, pencil poised.

"Oh," said Teddy, "I'll sing bass."

FDR's guesting at the former Czarist Palace in Yalta brings to mind the yarn told about Teddy Roosevelt's world tour. . . . While in Stockholm he lived at the royal palace. When "Mr. Big-Stick" was asked by a newsman how he liked the sensation of living in a palace, Teddy snapped: "I don't like them. You can't ring a bell and complain about the room!"

One of the staff offered his resignation to the executive editor of the old New York World. He explained that he was going to start his own little country newspaper. "I'd like some advice from you," said the reporter, "on how you think I ought to run it."

"You've come to the wrong person," said the exec. "Ask one of our indignant subscribers."

When President Roosevelt was Governor of New York a film salesman named Moe Schenck (he worked out of Albany) was introduced to him. . . . The other day Moe was in the White House to see one of the secretaries about a film. . . . As he came out of the office FDR came along.

"Well!" well'd Mr. Roosevelt. "How are you, Moe, you old sunuv-a-gun—what are you doing in Washington?"

Moe explained his mission briefly and started to go. FDR said: "Good luck, Moe. Don't be such a stranger. Come see me sometime."

"Mr. President," Moe intoned, "I'm a very busy man."

At a social event which Thomas Edison attended reluctantly at his wife's urging—the inventor finally escaped his admirers to sit in a corner. A friend noticed that he kept looking at his watch and, drawing closer, he heard Edison sigh deeply and murmur: "If there were only a dog here."

The home of Beethoven in Bonn has been converted into a memorial museum. In one of the rooms, roped off from curious hands, is the piano upon which Beethoven composed most of his famous music. A very snooty girl visited the shrine with a party of American tourists. She looked at the piano with awe and asked the guard if she might play just a few notes on it. She sat down and played a few bars of the Moonlight Sonata. As she left she remarked to the attendant: "I suppose all the great pianists who have come here at one time or another have played on it."

The guard replied: "No, miss, not at all. Paderewski was here several years ago, but said he wasn't worthy to touch it."

At a dinner party Bea Lillie (Lady Peel in private life) was wearing the family pearls. A feline meowed: "What lovely pearls, Bea. Are they genuine? Of course, you can always tell by biting them. Here, let me see."

"Gladly," said Lady Peel, proffering her jewels. "But remember, Duchess, you can't tell real pearls with false teeth."

One of the important Washington newspapers once reported (on its front page) a mild indisposition of President Roosevelt with: "President Kept to His Rooms by Cough."

FDR heard of it and requested several copies, which he shows to visiting diplomatic bigwigs in their moments of relaxation.

This is how one of the world's classics was written: Nathaniel Hawthorne worked as a bookkeeper. One day he was fired and came home depressed. But his wife wasn't. She told him that she had secretly saved money from household expenses so that he could one day afford to write the book he was planning.

That is how Hawthorne wrote "The Scarlet Letter."

It's supposed to have happened at President Roosevelt's inaugural reception. A midwest plumbing manufacturer who had supported the Demo campaign fund brought his teen-age daughter to the luncheon. The young lady had been coached for weeks on correct etiquette in company of all these big people. Everything went well until she was introduced to FDR. She curtsied slightly and they said with great deference, "This is a great honor, Mr. President, I've heard father speak of you many times."

WHO WILL CRAWL?

In this fight for a fair and free election, in this fight for self government in our own community. the Taxpayers have shown in the last two issues of this paper the attempt of those who now call themselves Non-Partisans to dictate and control this election.

The self-styled Non-partisans attempted to dominate and control this election by caucus, and when that failed, they tried to control the election by petition and by objections to anyone else running by petition.

Failing even in that, they printed what they called a "Sample Battle" showing only their own names upon it. They were afraid to show the names of those on the Bremen Taxpayers Ticket appearing to the left.

Even this was not enough to demonstrate their idea of "representative government", their idea of the "American Way". When an American citizen, when Winfield Roesner, exercised his birth-right, the right of every American to run for public office he was dispensed with, he was liquidated.

What did William Kreis mean when he said to Harry Payan, a public employee, a recipient of the purple heart and the silver star in the last war, "You must learn to crawl before you walk?" Who made William Kreis a dictator?

When you go to the polling booth on April 3, 1945 have only one dictator, your own conscience, the only dictator a man or woman will ever have. When you go to the polling place next Tuesday, April 3, 1945. WALK-DON'T CRAWL.

BOWEL CLEANING POWER OF ERB-HELP MEDICINE

One man recently took ERB-HELP three days and said afterward that he never would have believed his body contained so much filthy substance. He says his stomach, intestines, bowels and whole system were so thoroughly cleansed that his constant headaches came to an end, several pimply skin eruptions on his face dried up overnight, and even the rheumatic pains in his knees disappeared. At present he is an altogether different man feeling fine in every way.

ERB-HELP contains 12 Great Herbs; they cleanse bowels, clear gas from stomach, act on sluggish liver and kidneys. Miserable people soon feel different all over. So don't go on suffering! Get ERB-HELP. Hensel's Drug Store.

Soaken, surprised all the guests with his worthy demonstration.

We are confident Tinley Park 2132 will be rung often next winter when cold weather comes. Thanks Sam, you are so helpful.

The spring fashion show proved to be a screaming success. Each lady tried to out do her friends as she gracefully modeled her own lovely creation, and pointed out all the reasons why she thought she deserved the prize.

The men voted with a secret ballot and the results showed Miss Frieda Fussbox had won the grand prize by a large majority.

The ladies wondered if it really was her stunning creation, her influence or that wonderful hair do that went over so big with the men.

The game "Who is Who" made us really surprised that we knew so little about our fellow men.

What an artist Ben Bonehead proved to be by drawing his own portrait. It did look like Ben didn't it? Next was the review of the last party followed by showing how much luck and skill each individual possessed. John and Anne carried off high honors while the next went to Carsten Vogts and Minnie Mossbottom.

The consolation prizes which were awarded to Gertie Gaddabout and Henry Hackancough was liberally divided among all. The sumptuous lunch was evidently enjoyed by all and the hostess's invitation for a second helping was well taken up. We liked the style too.

Poor Dopey drizzle was lucky to have such an efficient nurse who knew just what to do at the right time. Tillie said he deserved what he got.

The ladies showed John that in bidding him goodbye they didn't need to be young and beautiful to give him sweet everlasting memories and if they keep their promises he should be popular at mail call.

The gang decided that during the summer months the parties would be discontinued and in place outings and picnics be held.

Cattle Prove Grass "Greener on Other Side of Fence"

CHICAGO—The old adage that "the grass is greener on the other side of the fence" has a scientific basis in fact, according to a statement made public here by the Middle West Soil Improvement Committee.

"When cattle will risk injury in order to get into another field for the grass on the other side, something more significant than bovine curiosity is involved," the statement points out. "Animal instinct and soil fertility are closely related."

"Recent soil studies using farm animals as the yardstick for measuring fertility revealed some striking results. Livestock invariably selected feeding areas where the soil had been fertilized, in preference to unfertilized areas. Their choice represented grass or grain that would promote more effective weight gains, better health and more prolific reproduction."

"Cattle confined their grazing of pasture to areas of a field that had been limed. Hogs turned into corn concentrated on the fertilized grain and left the unfertilized corn untouched, even though they passed to and fro through it. Barley was grazed out first in an area where 200 pounds of mixed fertilizer was applied, in contrast with a plot treated with only 100 pounds."

"Grains in the self-feeder were selected by hogs according to the soil treatment where the crops were grown. "All things considered, the 'other side of the fence' is sought by farm animals for the valid reason that it yields better nourishment, more proteins, vitamins and body-building food elements than the acreage that is unfertilized. Dumb animals are teaching human beings the value of soil improvement. Experiments have shown that cattle, hogs and horses will continue season after season to show their preference for pasturage or feed that has been produced on land adequately supplied with mixed fertilizer. These experiments have shown, too, that fertilizer has a 'carry-over' benefit that lasts for as long as eight years after the original application."

"These tests indicate emphatically how important the matter of soil fertility is, if we are to produce more and better food per acre and thus reduce production costs in the competitive postwar period. Soil replenishment can be readily accomplished by attention to a few fundamentals. Among these are liming, crop rotation, the regular application of adequate amounts of mixed fertilizer and the growing of legume crops."

IN MEMORIAN

Leonard Hennreich—In loving memory of Leonard Hennreich, Woodland Acres, Mokena, who passed away February 9, 1945.

I cannot say, and I will not say That he is dead. He is just away With a cherry smile, and a wave of the hand, He has wandered into an unknown land,

And left us dreaming how very fair It needs must be, since he lingers there.

And you—O you, who the wildest yearn For the old-time step and the glad return,—

Think of him faring on, as dear In the love of There as the love of here; Think of him still as the same I say:

He is not dead—he is just away!

The Bankers are putting on a terrific drive to take over first place as they swept three games from the tailspinning Smokers and cut the lead to four games. The Bankers have won five out of the last six games while the Smokers have lost five straight. The V-Eighters have won four out of six dropping two to the red hot Oilers who have won ten out of twelve games.

With the Smokers in a tailspin looks like the Bankers vs V-Eighters the last night of the season for top honors as they meet each other then. But don't sell the Oilers short either, they are rolling at a fast force.

The paperhangers took two games from the Robins thereby pushing the Robins deeper into the cellar.

Looks bad for the Smokers as they tangle with the red hot V-Eighters and the Bankers taking on the last place Robins.

Dear Mrs. Kruspe:

I received your Christmas gift the other day along with many others. It sure is swell of you folks to send a package to all the fellows in service. Know it must take a lot of effort and work on your part. I wish to thank you very much for the package that I received. It was among the first I have received since leaving the States.

Out here it is very hot with a lot of rainfall. Sometimes the nights cool down so one can sleep without perspiring and a lot of effort. We have been loading supplies aboard the last couple of days. Received some fresh fruit. This is the first we have had in two months.

I wish to thank you once again for your very appreciable package.

Sincerely yours,
R. E. Hewson.

Dont forget the Food and Bake sale Saturday, March 31 at Schmaedeke Store. The sale to start at 3 pm. and is sponsored by the Ladies Aid of the Christ Lutheran church. War Vets Neglected, Abused; Deaths High, Prober Asserts Shocking charges of inefficiency, neglect, racketeering and downright carelessness and callousness that are causing an unconscionably high death rate among our war veterans in government hospitals are made in the March issue of Cosmopolitan magazine following an exhaustive investigation of the Veterans Administration by Albert Q. Maisel.

In a thoroughly documented exposé of the pitiful conditions under which our war veterans are dying in our government hospitals at an alarming rate, Maisel charges that despite the astronomical sums of money appropriated for the treatment of these veterans, only one patient in six leaves our government hospitals cured.

"Only three out of five complete their hospitalization and win even the label of 'improved,'" Maisel declares. "The rest die or are discharged as 'unimproved' or run away to enter other hospitals or to suffer and die quietly at home."

Investigation of the hospitalization given veterans consumed six months and covered hospitals throughout the eastern half of the United States.

Asserting that the statistics used in the article are based on the public figures issued by the Veterans Administration itself, Maisel declares that "in many of the Veterans' Hospitals I have visited, the death rates are actually far higher, the 'cure' rates far lower and conditions far, far worse than any cold statistics can ever indicate."

In a bitter indictment of Veterans Administration, Brig.-General Frank T. Hines and his underlings in the central office in Washington, Maisel declares:

"I have found doctors so overloaded that they could give the average patient only seven minutes attention a week. Not seven minutes a day—but seven minutes a week."

"I have found nurses so negligent that they did not even bother to wash their hands after examining one patient with a contagious disease and before turning to another."

"I have found some doctors who could hold no position in any well-run hospital; cynical men who joked to me about their patients' miseries; incompetent men who rejected offhand every modern advance in medicine."

"I have seen desperately sick veterans served food so cold that it would be indignantly rejected in the worst Bowery flophouse. And I have seen these same veterans charged unconscionably high prices by racketeering concessionaires, permitted to operate within hospitals by complacent superintendents."

"I have seen men denied surgery they needed, denied modern treatments that could have cured them—and even sneered at by officials for presuming to ask for these things."

After comparing conditions in government hospitals with those in state and county hospitals which glaringly highlight the official neglect of our veterans, Maisel urges a thorough housecleaning of the Veterans' Administration.

"The root of this cancer is in the Central Office in Washington, among men who have long been aware of the situation, who have seen it grow worse and worse for two decades, who have failed miserably to clean up the growing mess," he declares. "The cure, too, must start at the fountainhead—in the Central Office—with drastic changes in both personnel and policies. Wartime 'emergencies' cannot serve as an excuse."

USHERS IN STEAM'S NEW ERA

New and revolutionary is this streamlined locomotive — a Steam-Turbine-Electric—one of three ordered by The Chesapeake and Ohio Railway, to be built by Baldwin Locomotive Works and Westinghouse Electric & Manufacturing Company. This locomotive embodies the best features of steam, turbine and electric drive, and is said by President C. E. Newton of the C. & O. to mark a "distinct technological improvement over all existing types of steam and diesel road locomotives." The engine is capable of speeds of more than a hundred miles an hour under full load. The coal supply is carried in the head of the locomotive instead of the tender. The boiler is situated in the center section behind the engineer's cab. The electric motors, which drive the wheels, are in the rear.

Wartime Corn Crops Set New High

Heavy Yielding Hybrids, Plus Intelligent Fertilization, Enable Farmers to Produce More Than Three Billion Bushels of Corn Yearly.

CHICAGO — Those bumper corn crops grandfather used to boast about were just drops in the bucket compared to what his grandsons are growing in this Second World war, according to a statement made public here by the Middle West Soil Improvement Committee.

"In granddad's day," says the statement, "40 acres of corn producing 40 bushels per acre—or a total of 1,600 bushels—was a prime year's work for a farmer. Today, with hybrid corn, there are plenty of farms where one man alone can produce between 5,000 and 6,000 bushels per season."

"Several factors have been responsible for modern record-breaking corn yields. One is the switch from open-pollinated varieties to heavy-yielding hybrids. Another is the increasing knowledge by farmers of how to fertilize hybrid corn which takes far more nourishment per acre out of the soil than did its lower-yielding predecessors. A third is the wartime contribution of the fertilizer industry in providing vast quantities of plant food in time to meet the unprecedented demands. In spite of labor shortages, transportation bottlenecks, scarcities of materials and overworked machinery, fertilizer manufacturers have established a remarkable record of performance."

"It is estimated that more corn was fertilized throughout the Corn Belt states last year than ever before in history. Tests and research by agronomists at state agricultural experiment stations have been of enormous value in increasing the farmer's knowledge of how to fertilize hybrid corn."

Attempts at curbing travel will be tried before rationing is seriously considered. Thought is being given to placing priorities on hotel rooms in crowded areas and letting servicemen aboard trains, bus lines, etc. first.

To make a richer and more flavorful white sauce, stir in about 4 tablespoons of real mayonnaise at the very last. It will add that special hollandaise-like touch.

Because the American public is buying far above the normal in the textile line, many stores are adopting a one-suit-per-customer plan and others are enforcing similar purchasing restrictions.

Want your appliances to work all the time?

Empty vacuum bag after using

Unless bag is emptied after each using, the necessary suction may be lessened. Turn bag inside out occasionally and brush thoroughly, but never wash it.

Don't replace fuse with a penny

Fuses act as safety valves for your electric wiring and equipment. You lose this vital protection if you use pennies or metal discs as substitutes.

Avoid overloading washer

When a washer must labor to take care of the overload, its life is shortened. So follow manufacturer's recommendations as to the right load for your washer.

Don't use fork to remove toast

Call this toaster an old reactionary, if you will, but he's right. Just a slip of the fork and a toaster can be stabbed right in his wire section.

Defrost refrigerator regularly

The longer a refrigerator goes without defrosting, the less efficient it is and the more current it uses. Be safe—follow manufacturer's defrosting instructions.

Don't drop iron on floor

More irons are damaged by dropping than any other way. You may break some vital part difficult or impossible to replace in wartime.

Busy? YES! Too busy? NO!

You'll find her always ready to help you. She's one of our busy "Information" operators—one of 545 in the Illinois Bell area who handle a total of about 132,000 requests every day.

Some of these calls ask for new, changed or out-of-town numbers, but many thousands ask for numbers now listed in the telephone directory. That's why we make this request—

PLEASE DON'T ASK "INFORMATION" FOR NUMBERS LISTED IN YOUR DIRECTORY.

When you follow this suggestion, you save yourself the trouble of making two calls instead of one. Also, you free skilled operators for essential telephone work at other switchboards. ... Thank you!
